CURRENT POSITION:

Associate Teaching Professor

EDUCATION:

Ph.D., Sociology, University of Wisconsin - Madison, August 2007 (successful defense May 2007).
Dissertation: "Differences Between African-Americans and Whites in Migration to the United States South, 1955-2000."

Description: Using IPUMS data and a nested logit model, I show that African-Americans' likelihood of interstate migration - both total and return - has increased dramatically over time, and grown increasingly similar to that of whites. This pattern holds net of origin and destination factors, individual characteristics and distance. Further, despite its history of racism, the South has become increasingly attractive for African-Americans compared to the rest of the country.

RESEARCH POSITIONS:

Working with Marianne Hillemeier and Pamela Farley Short at the PSU Department of Health Policy Administration and the Population Research Institute, I programmed a simulation of Medicaid and SCHIP health-insurance eligibility, based on data from the Survey of Income and Program Participation. This research addressed the problem of eligible citizens who were not covered. 2003-2005.

Working with Professor Nancy Landale at the PSU Population Research Institute, whose project was sponsored by the National Academy of Sciences Panel on Hispanics in the United States, I updated a database of Census population characteristics. This research produced a chapter on family structure in a NAS-published book, Hispanics and the Future of America. 2003.

Working with Irene Padavic and Karin Brewster at the Florida State University Center for Demography and Population Health, I used SIPP and CPS data to investigate race differences in child-care arrangements between 1977 and 1994. 1998-2000.

Research Assistant, with Glenn Fuguitt, University of Wisconsin-Madison Department of Rural Sociology. Co-authored or otherwise assisted in publication of several research papers, chapters and reports on aspects of the migration of the elderly and African-Americans, the contribution of migration to local levels of education and poverty in the population, and other topics. 1992-1999.

OTHER EMPLOYMENT:

2000-2003. Database Analyst, ERSGroup, Tallahassee, Florida. Assisted consulting economists and programmed statistical tests for very large human-resources databases for employment-law related issues and employment litigation.
